

Contributors/Contributeurs

T. W. Acheson is a member of the History Department of the University of New Brunswick. His article is drawn from his doctoral thesis recently completed for the University of Toronto.

Judith Fingard is a member of the History Department of Dalhousie University and the author of several articles on the activities of the Church of England in the British North American colonies and a recently published book on The Anglican Design for Loyalist Nova Scotia, 1783-1816.

A graduate of Bishop's University and the University of New Brunswick, John I. Little is now a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Ottawa.

A graduate of the Canadian-American Relations programme at the University of Maine at Orono, Ronald D. Tallman is assistant professor of Canadian history at the State University College of Arts and Science, Plattsburgh, New York, where Julie I. Tallman is a graduate student in history.

Lieutenant Moody's Narrative was contributed by W. Stewart MacNutt, Chairman of the Canadian Committee of the Programme for Loyalist Studies and Publications.

A graduate of Dalhousie University and the University of London, Carman Miller is a member of the History Department of McGill University and the author of several articles on late nineteenth and early twentieth Century Canadian politics.

Hugh G. Thorburn is a member of the Department of Political Studies at Queen's University and the author of several articles and books on Canadian politics, including Politics in New Brunswick.