

Contributors/Collaborateurs

One of the founders of Acadiensis, Stewart MacNutt's works are well known to all students of the Atlantic region.

Leslie Upton is a member of the History Department of the University of British Columbia and a frequent contributor to this journal.

The author of numerous works on Canadian-American relations, until recently Alvin Gluek, Jr. was a member of the History Department at Erindale College, University of Toronto.

Carl Wallace teaches at Laurentian University. An earlier version of his article was delivered at the 1976 Atlantic Canada Studies Conference in Fredericton.

William Whiteley is a member of the history department of the Memorial University of Newfoundland.

The author of several articles previously published in Acadiensis, Ernie Forbes now teaches at the University of New Brunswick.

From the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education Harvey J. Graff has taken up a post at the University of Texas at Dallas.

One of Canada's most distinguished historians, Peter Waite teaches at Dalhousie University.

A member of the University of Toronto history department, Robert Bothwell is currently working on a life of C. D. Howe.

Mary Vipond teaches at the Loyola Campus of Concordia University.

Formerly an economic advisor to the Government of Nova Scotia, William Smith is now a member of the economics department at the University of New Brunswick.