

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

JAMES D. FROST studied history at McGill University, Queen's University and Dalhousie University. He now works as a commercial analyst for the Halifax-Dartmouth Port Commission. An earlier version of his study was presented at the Atlantic Canada Studies Conference in Halifax in 1980.

JAMES D. ALSOP is a research fellow in the School of History at the University of Liverpool. He is a graduate of the universities of Winnipeg, Western Ontario and Cambridge, and is the author of several articles on British and colonial history.

MELVIN BAKER is a graduate of Memorial University and the University of Western Ontario, where he completed a PhD on the history of St. John's. He has written for the Urban History Review and the Newfoundland Quarterly and is now a research assistant in the Office of the Opposition for the Province of Newfoundland and Labrador.

ROBERT A. YOUNG teaches politics at the University of Western Ontario, and is a graduate of McGill University and Oxford University. His doctoral work explored economic, administrative and political change in post-war New Brunswick. He has published in various Canadian journals, most recently in Canadian Public Administration.

Formerly Assistant Provincial Archivist of Prince Edward Island, H.T. HOLMAN is now a student-at-law in Ottawa. ELWOOD JONES teaches history at Trent University and has written on various aspects of Ontario history. He is now president of the Canadian Church Historical Society. Professeur adjoint à l'Université de Montréal, JOHN A. DICKINSON has published several studies on the history of native society and on New France; his book Justice et justiciables. La procédure civile à la Prévôté de Québec, 1667-1759 will appear shortly from Les Presses de l'Université Laval. BRIAN TENNYSON teaches at the University College of Cape Breton. He coedited Cape Breton Historical Essays (College of Cape Breton Press, 1980) and recently published Canadian Relations with South Africa: A Diplomatic History (University Press of America, 1982). WENDY MITCHINSON teaches history at the University of Windsor and writes on women's history and the history of medicine; she is coeditor of a new collection entitled Essays in Canadian Medical History, to be published by McClelland and Stewart. Chairman of the Department of History at the University of Toronto, PAUL RUTHERFORD is the author of The Making of the Canadian Media (McGraw-Hill Ryerson, 1978) and A Victorian Authority: The Daily Press in Late Nineteenth-Century Canada (University of Toronto Press 1982). REG WHITAKER teaches political science at Carleton University. He is the author of The Government Party: Organizing and Financing the Liberal Party of Canada, 1930-58 (University of Toronto Press, 1977) and an editor of Studies in Political Economy: A Socialist Review.