

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

DANIEL THORP teaches history at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. The author of The Moravian Community in Colonial North Carolina (1989), he has also written numerous articles on the southern colonial frontier of Anglo-America. GEOFFREY PLANK is a member of the History Department at the University of Cincinnati. His current research concerns "The Culture of Conquest: Acadia or Nova Scotia in the British Colonial Imagination, 1690-1759". NICOLE LANG est professeure d'histoire au campus d'Edmundston de l'Université de Moncton. Ses recherches portent principalement sur l'histoire récente des travailleurs et du syndicalisme au Nouveau-Brunswick. MARILYN GERRIETS has published articles on the rise and fall of the General Mining Association of Nova Scotia in Business History and in Acadiensis. She is a member of the Department of Economics at St. Francis Xavier University. Professor Emeritus of history at the University of Ottawa, JULIAN GWYN is the author of several articles on the economy of colonial Nova Scotia. His research in this area has culminated in a book, Excessive Expectations: Studies in Nova Scotia's Business and Economic History, 1740-1870. Professor of history at Memorial University, MALCOLM MacLEOD has published several articles in Acadiensis and is the author of the CHA historical booklet, Kindred Countries: Canada and Newfoundland before Confederation. His current research focuses on the history of agricultural journalism in the Atlantic region. DANIEL VICKERS is also a member of the History Department at Memorial University. His book, Farmers and Fishermen: Two Centuries of Work in Essex County, Massachusetts, 1630-1850 (1994) was awarded the AHA Dunning Prize. PETER RUSSELL is the author of "Here we are Laird ourselves": Popular Attitudes to Social Structure and Social Mobility in Upper Canada (1990). He teaches history and economics at Okanagan University College. Professor of history at the University of New Brunswick, PHILLIP BUCKNER is well known to readers of this journal. His articles on Canadian constitutional issues and the history of Confederation have appeared in international as well as national scholarly journals. GAIL CAMPBELL teaches history at the University of New Brunswick. Her research focuses on 19th century political culture in that province. LORRAINE COOPS recently completed her Ph.D. dissertation, "Living by Faith: Maritime Baptist Single Women Missionaries in India, 1880-1939", and is currently an adjunct professor with the Queen's University History Department. She worked with George Rawlyk from 1991 to 1995 as a graduate student and assistant. DOUG HESSLER is an independent researcher, writer and copy editor. He assisted George Rawlyk with Aspects of the Canadian Evangelical Experience (McGill-Queen's University Press, forthcoming).