

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Assistant Professor of Social Science and History at York University, CRAIG HERON co-edited On the Job: Confronting the Labour Process in Canada and is the author of a forthcoming book, Working in Steel: The Early Years in Canada, 1883-1935. ROBERT MCINTOSH is a graduate of the Canadian Studies programmes at the University of Alberta and Carleton and a Ph.D. student at Carleton University, where he is working on a thesis on turn-of-the-century child labour in Canada. Head of the Department of English at Mount Allison and an Associate of the Centre for Canadian Studies, GWENDOLYN DAVIES has written extensively on Maritime Literature and is currently editing The Stepsure Letters for publication by the Centre for Editing Early Canadian Texts. After completing her M.A. at Dalhousie University, JANET GUILDFORD entered the Ph.D. programme there and is working on a thesis tentatively entitled "Schools and Socio-Economic Change: A study in the Organization of Halifax Society". JEAN-FRANÇOIS BRIÈRE is a member of the Department of French at the State University of New York at Albany and has written extensively on the 18th Century French Cod Fisheries. CECIL J. HOUSTON teaches geography at the Erindale Campus, University of Toronto in Mississauga and WILLIAM J. SMYTH at St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, Ireland and they co-authored The Sash Canada Wore: A Historical Geography of the Orange Order in Canada. JOHN G. REID teaches history at Saint Mary's University and is the author of a number of books and articles on the history of Atlantic Canada, including a two-volume history of Mount Allison University. LEWIS J. POTEET is a member of the English Department at Concordia University and specializes in the study of language in Nova Scotia. PETER ENNALS is a specialist in regional architecture and normally teaches geography at Mount Allison University, but this year he is on leave and teaching Canadian Studies in Japan.