

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

W.D. HAMILTON is a professor of education and co-director of the Micmac-Maliseet Institute at the University of New Brunswick, Fredericton. He has published several books and articles on historical and literary subjects, including, with W.A. Spray, Source Materials Relating to the New Brunswick Indian (Hamray Books, 1976). TERRENCE MURPHY is a member of the Department of Religious Studies at the Memorial University of Newfoundland. His previous work has appeared in the Canadian Catholic Historical Association Study Sessions. M. BROOK TAYLOR is a graduate student at the University of Toronto, where he is completing a PhD thesis entitled "The Writing of English-Canadian History in the Nineteenth Century". His paper was originally presented at the Atlantic Canada Studies Conference in Saint John in 1983. A reporter for the Halifax Chronicle-Herald, DEAN JOBB is a graduate of the Canadian Studies Programme at Mount Allison University and is preparing an MA thesis for Queen's University on the life of Josiah Wood. NANCIELLEN DAVIS teaches anthropology at Mount Saint Vincent University in Halifax; she has published several articles on ethnicity, women and sociocultural change, and her contribution to this issue was originally presented to the Atlantic Workshop at Caraquet in 1983. A historian at the University of Western Ontario, PETER NEARY is an authority on the 20th century history of Newfoundland; his most recent book, coauthored with Patrick O'Flaherty, is Part of the Main: An Illustrated History of Newfoundland and Labrador (Breakwater Books, 1983). J.L. GRANATSTEIN is a professor of history at York University; his many works in Canadian history include Canada's War: The Politics of the Mackenzie King Government (Oxford University Press, 1975) and The Ottawa Men: The Civil Service Mandarins (Oxford University Press, 1982). CHARLES ALLAIN, SANDRA BARRY, GEOFF BUDDEN, ANGELA CRANDALL, MARILYN HOWARD, BARBARA JAQUES, ROSEMARIE LANGHOUT, RICHARD McCLELLAN, MOIRA McLAUGHLIN and STEPHEN SMITH prepared their composite review of David Alexander's Atlantic Canada and Confederation (University of Toronto Press, 1983) while enrolled in the Atlantic Canada graduate seminar in the Department of History, University of New Brunswick, 1983-84. A member of the editorial board of the Urban History Review, PETER RIDER is the Atlantic Provinces Historian at the National Museum of Man, Ottawa. His current work includes an urban history of Charlottetown. The author of several studies of the Loyalist experience in British North America, ANN GORMAN CONDON is Material History Coordinator for the University of New Brunswick.