

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Editor of Workers and the State in 20th Century Nova Scotia, MICHAEL EARLE is working on a Ph.D. at Dalhousie University. His co-author, H. GAMBERG, is a member of Department of Sociology at Dalhousie. SHEILA M. PENNEY completed her M.A. at Dalhousie and is now a Ph.D. student there. RALPH PASTORE has published extensively on the early history of Newfoundland and the Native Peoples of Atlantic Canada and is a member of the History Department at Memorial University of Newfoundland. After receiving degrees from Princeton and Oxford, PETER POPE entered the doctoral programme in history at Memorial University. ROSEMARY OMMER is also a member of the History Department at MUN and has written extensively on the Atlantic fisheries; she was also managing editor of the recent Newfoundland Royal Commission on Employment and Unemployment. Another graduate of Dalhousie University, JAY WHITE is now enrolled in the Ph.D. programme at McMaster University. DAVID A. MACDONALD received his Ph.D. from Simon Fraser University and now teaches anthropology at Memorial University of Newfoundland. JAMES NAYLOR currently holds a SSHRCC Post-Doctoral Fellowship at York University. TERENCE CROWLY teaches in the History Department at the University of Guelph and is currently at work on a biography of Agnes Macphail. A member of the Department of History at Memorial University of Newfoundland, JAMES HILLER has published extensively in the field of modern Newfoundland history. A frequent contributor to Acadiensis and a very prolific scholar with wide-ranging interests, JACK BUMSTED teaches history at the University of Manitoba. MARGARET CONRAD is a member of the Department of History at Acadia University and the author of a scholarly biography of George Nowlan.