

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

RONALD RUDIN is a professor of history at Concordia University. He is the author of numerous books, most recently Remembering and Forgetting in Acadie: A Historian's Journey through Public Memory (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 2009), winner of the 2010 book award from the National Council on Public History. TINA LOO is a Canada research chair in the Department of History at the University of British Columbia, where she teaches environmental history and the history of Canada. SUSAN NEWHOOK worked for almost 20 years in the CBC departments of news and current affairs. She is an assistant professor in the School of Journalism at the University of King's College in Halifax, Nova Scotia. PETER L. TWOHIG is a member of the Department of History and the Atlantic Canada Studies program at Saint Mary's University. PETER LUDLOW recently completed his doctoral dissertation at Queen's University, Belfast, entitled "More than Codmen: The Newfoundland-Irish in Industrial Cape Breton, 1890-1919." He has recently published an article in the autumn 2010 issue of the Journal of Irish and Scottish Studies on the experience of Irish Catholics in Scottish Cape Breton. CECILIA MORGAN teaches history in the Department of Theory and Policy Studies, University of Toronto. Her research and publishing include work on the history of gender and commemoration in 19th- and 20th-century Ontario; she is currently completing research on Native and Métis peoples' travels from British North America to Britain and beyond, 1800-1914. DAVID B. MARSHALL is a member of the Department of History at the University of Calgary. He is the author of Secularizing the Faith: Canadian Protestant Clergy and the Crisis of Belief, 1850-1940 (Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1992) as well as numerous reviews and book chapters on religion in Canada.