

CONTRIBUTORS

David Charters is Deputy Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies. He also lectures on Internal War at the University of New Brunswick and is the author of many articles, mainly dealing with terrorism, counter-insurgency and intelligence operations. At the date of publication, he is on a fact-finding visit to Northern Ireland.

Dominick Graham is Professor of History at the University of New Brunswick and Associate Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies. He is the author of Cassino and British Politics and American Defence 1748-1756, and is currently writing on British Army doctrine in two world wars.

Micheal Kelly is a lecturer in Political Science, University of Ottawa. He is widely published, mainly in the fields of political violence, internal war, terrorism and revolution.

Michael McDowell, a Northern-Irish journalist, is a Senior Associate of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He has written for a wide range of United States journals and newspapers and is a familiar figure on television, radio and public platforms on the East Coast.

Thomas Mitchell is a lecturer in Political Science at Carleton University. He is a co-investigator for the Ontario Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry and has written articles on violence and politics in Canada and on international aspects of this field.

Maurice Tugwell is Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies, University of New Brunswick. He is the author of The Unquiet Peace, Airborne to Battle and Arnhem: A Case Study, and during his military career he served in Palestine, Cyprus, Malaya, Aden, Iran and Northern Ireland.