

SUBSCRIPTIONS AND DONATIONS

The Centre for Conflict Studies at the University of New Brunswick is an independent unit, not funded by the government, and only supported by the University for certain administrative overheads. It relies for its continued operations on public and corporate support and its charitable status allows such donations to be tax-deductible. The Centre offers conferences, seminars and presentations, as well as producing Conflict Quarterly, and the quality of these operations depends on the research and analysis carried out at the Centre by principals and a widening circle of associates working in the field of low intensity conflict. If you value our contribution to peace and social harmony, please include a voluntary donation with your subscription to the journal.
