

CONTRIBUTORS

Martin Blumenson is Professorial Lecturer in International Affairs at George Washington University, Washington, D.C. He is author of twelve books in the field of military history, among them the two volume The Patton Papers, and The Vilde Affair, a study of the origins of the French resistance.

David Charters is Deputy Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies. He is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick and received his PhD in War Studies from King's College, University of London. The author of many articles in the field of low intensity conflict, he has lectured on internal war at the University of New Brunswick since 1977.

Dominick Graham holds the Chair of Military and Strategic Studies in the Department of History at the University of New Brunswick and is Associate Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies. He is the author of Cassino and British Politics and American Defence 1748-1756. His latest work on British Army doctrine in the two world wars will be published in the autumn.

F.E.C. Gregory is a Lecturer in Politics at the University of Southampton, England. A graduate of the Universities of Bristol and Southampton, he is widely published in the field of police systems and public order problems.

Micheal Kelly is an Adjunct Professor of Political Science at the University of Ottawa. He is widely published in the fields of political violence, internal war, terrorism and revolution.

David Levy is a Canadian journalist based in Vancouver. A graduate of the Universities of British Columbia and London in the field of Russian Studies, he founded the CBC's Moscow bureau in 1964 and freelanced for Canadian and other western media from Moscow for ten years. He also served in Paris, London, Bonn and Vienna before resettling in Canada.

Thomas Mitchell is a lecturer in Political Science at Carleton University, Ottawa. He has served as a co-investigator for the Ontario Royal Commission on Violence in the Communications Industry and is the author of articles on violence and politics in Canada and on international aspects of this field.