

CONTRIBUTORS

Baffour Agyeman-Duah, of Ghana, is currently visiting lecturer in the Department of Political Science at the University of Colorado, Boulder. Dr. Agyeman-Duah received his Ph.D. in international studies from the University of Denver, and has previously been published in African Review.

Bruce Hoffman is presently a staff member in the Security and Subnational Conflict Research Program in the Rand Corporation, Santa Monica, California, where he has researched terrorist organizations and issues relating to subnational conflict and low-intensity military operations. A doctoral graduate of St. Antony's College, Oxford, he is also author of The Failure of Britain's Military Strategy Within Palestine, 1939-1947, published by Bar-Ilan University Press in 1984.

Vincent B. Khapoya is Associate Professor of Political Science at Oakland University, Rochester, Michigan. He received his Ph.D. in international studies from the University of Denver. He has published extensively in the field of African politics and international affairs.

André Kuczewski is with the Department of Administration and Policy Studies at McGill University. He works and writes on various aspects of international affairs.

Colin McIlheney is on the staff of the Northern Ireland Council for Educational Research, at Queen's University, Belfast. Formerly a Thouron Fellow at the University of Pennsylvania, he is currently on a two-year research leave at Jesus College, Oxford.

Thomas H. Mitchell is a Research Associate in the Public Affairs Division of the Conference Board of Canada. He is the author of a number of publications on conflict and security-related issues.

James B. Motley is Director, Terrorist Research and Low-Intensity Conflict Studies at the National Institute for Public Policy, Fairfax, Virginia. Dr. Motley received his Ph.D. from Catholic University, and is also a graduate of Florida State University and The Citadel. He retired from the U.S. Army in the rank of Colonel in 1983, following a lengthy career of service in Vietnam, Germany, the Pentagon, and various defense colleges and schools. The National Defense University Press published his book U.S. Strategy to Counter Domestic Political Terrorism in 1983, and he has been widely published in military, public policy and academic journals.

Jerome Slater is Professor of Political Science at the State University of New York, Buffalo. A graduate of Yale and Princeton, where he received his Ph.D., Professor Slater teaches and writes in the field of American foreign policy.