

CONTRIBUTORS

Richard D. Crabtree is currently a Lieutenant-Colonel in the United States Air Force, serving in the Headquarters, Air Force Office of Special Investigations. A graduate of the University of Colorado and Northeastern University, he recently completed a year as a research associate in the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, University of Pittsburgh where he studied the effects of intelligence oversight restrictions on the USAF's anti-terrorism program.

Efraim Karsh is a lecturer in International Relations at Tel Aviv University and is a research associate of the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies. He is currently spending a year as a research associate at the International Institute for Strategic Studies, London.

Peer H. Lange is a specialist on the Warsaw Pact at the Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik at Ebenhausen, in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Timothy J. Lomperis is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Duke University and is currently on leave as a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Centre for International Affairs at Harvard. He is the author of a major study of the Vietnam war, The War Everyone Lost and Won (Louisiana State University Press, 1984).

James B. Motley is Director, National Security Studies, at Defense Systems Inc., in McLean, Virginia. A Vietnam veteran, Dr. Motley received his PhD from Catholic University. He has published widely on various aspects of low-intensity conflict.

Stephen G. Rabe is Associate Professor of History at the University of Texas at Dallas. He has published a number of studies on inter-American relations and is currently working on a book on the Latin American policy of the Eisenhower administration.

David Stafford is Director of Studies and Deputy Director of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs. A graduate of Cambridge and the London School of Economics, he served in the British Foreign Office before becoming a Professor of History at the University of Victoria. He has published widely in the field of intelligence, and is an executive member of the Canadian Association for Security and Intelligence Studies.