

CONTRIBUTORS

Francis Coghlan is Professor of History at the University of New Brunswick and a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of Conflict Quarterly. His particular field of interest is American diplomatic history.

John E. Finn is Assistant Professor in the Department of Government at Wesleyan University, Connecticut.

Richard C. Martin is Chairman of the Department of Religious Studies at Arizona State University, Tempe, Arizona. His areas of scholarly expertise are Middle Eastern Religions and the relationship between religion and violence.

Michael McKinley is Lecturer in International Relations and Strategic Studies in the Department of Politics, University of Western Australia. He is a graduate of Victoria University, New Zealand, and the Australian National University. International terrorism is one of his areas of concentration. In the preparation of this article Dr. McKinley was Visiting Fellow in the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre, ANU.

K.G. Robertson is Lecturer in Sociology and member of the Graduate School of European and International Studies, University of Reading, U.K. He is the author of Public Secrets (Macmillan, 1982) and editor of British and American Perspectives on Intelligence (RUSI/Macmillan, 1986). He is currently engaged in a study of internal security in democratic states.