

CONTRIBUTORS

Ali-Fuat Borovali received his Ph.D. from Queen's University. Working at the Center for International Relations there, he did his research on Middle East politics and Turkish civil-military relations. Recently he has taught at the University of Prince Edward Island and St. Thomas University in Fredericton.

David Charters is Director of the Centre for Conflict Studies and Executive Editor of Conflict Quarterly.

Vilma E. Petrash is a doctoral candidate in international affairs at the University of Pittsburgh. A Venezuelan national and holder of two prestigious fellowships, upon graduation she will join the faculty of the School of International Studies, Universidad Central de Venezuela and will also work as a foreign policy analyst and advisor in the Ministry of Foreign Relations.

Peter St. John is Associate Professor of International Relations at the University of Manitoba. He received his doctorate from the University of London and has published and lectured extensively on Canadian foreign policy, Middle East politics, terrorism, and intelligence activities. He is a member of the Executive of the Canadian Association for Security and Intelligence Studies.

Harold Dana Sims is Professor of Latin American History at the University of Pittsburgh where his research interests include both social history and international relations. He has published four books and some 25 articles on Mexico, Central America and the Caribbean. This is his third article on Central America for Conflict Quarterly.

J.A. Emerson Vermaat is a Dutch journalist who specializes in international affairs. He is author of a book on the World Council of Churches and has also written extensively on East-West relations, military issues, terrorism, West European peace movements, and international law.