

CONTRIBUTORS

Glenn Hastedt is Associate Professor of Political Science at James Madison University in Virginia. He received his doctorate from Indiana University and has taught at the State University of New York. He is author of several studies on American intelligence policy issues. His previous article in Conflict Quarterly was published in Summer 1984.

David Isby is a Washington attorney and consultant, currently attached to the BDM Corporation. He has also served as a legislative assistant in the U.S. Congress and as a journalist. His several works on the Soviet Army have earned him the reputation as an authority in this field. His first-hand experience of the Afghan War includes travelling "in-country" with the Mujahideen in 1984, 1985, and 1987.

Robert Mandel is Associate Professor of International Affairs at Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Oregon. A graduate of Brown University, he received his PhD from Yale. He is author of several works on aspects of international relations and conflict.

Jeffrey Ian Ross, a Canadian, is Research Associate at the Center for Comparative Politics, University of Colorado at Boulder. He received his Bachelor's degree from University of Toronto and Master's in Political Science from University of Colorado. He has recently completed a data base on political terrorism in Canada called Attributes of Political Terrorism in Canada (ATIC).

Sanford Silverburg is Professor and Chairman of Political Science at Catawba College, Salisbury, North Carolina. He received his PhD in International relations from American University and has held a number of teaching and research positions. His writing focuses on diplomatic and legal aspects of the Middle East conflict.

Douglas L. Wheeler is Professor of Modern History at the University of New Hampshire, Durham, New Hampshire. He is an Affiliate of the Center for International Affairs at Harvard University, and a Research Associate of the African Studies Center at Boston University. Professor Wheeler is also Coordinator of the International Conference Group on Portugal, and has written on Portuguese intelligence.