

CONTRIBUTORS

Ernest Evans is an adjunct professor of political science at American University. A graduate of Brown University and MIT, he has taught at Catholic University, Georgetown and Rhodes College. His most recent book is Wars Without Splendor: the U.S. Military and Low-Level Conflict (Greenwood Press, 1987).

John E. Finn is Assistant Professor in the Department of Government, Wesleyan University. He is a graduate of the Georgetown University Law Center, where he was editor of the Georgetown Law Journal, and received his PhD from Princeton. He is currently preparing a book for Oxford University Press on the constitutional dimensions of anti-terrorist legislation.

Jesse Goldstaub is a visiting Research Fellow in the Department of Political Science at McGill University. He is author of several monographs, books, and other scholarly publications.

Zeev Ivianski, PhD, is a former lecturer in the Department of History and Russian Studies at Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is author of a book and several scholarly articles on concepts of terrorism.

Patrick James is Associate Professor of Political Science at McGill University. He is a graduate of the University of Western Ontario and the University of Maryland. He is author of two books and numerous articles on international crises and conflict.

Diane Tueller Pritchett is completing a PhD in political science at Boston University, where she is writing a dissertation on patterns of conflict and cooperation between Syria, Egypt and Libya from 1970 to 1980.

Khachig Tololyan is Associate Professor of English at Wesleyan University. Born and raised in the Middle East, he has a PhD in comparative literature. More recently, he has been involved in research, writing and lecturing on Armenian terrorism.

Grant Wardlaw is a Senior Criminologist at the Australian Institute of Criminology, in Canberra, Australia. He is a specialist on terrorism, special warfare, public order and narcotics law enforcement. He has published and lectured widely in these fields.