

CONTRIBUTORS

Larry Cable is Professor of History at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and has also taught at the University of Cincinnati. He served in South-east Asia during the Vietnam conflict.

John M. Carland is a historian with the operational history branch at the U.S. Army Center of Military History, Washington, D.C. He received his PhD in British Imperial History at the University of Toronto. He is currently working on operations May 1965 to November 1966 in the C.M.H.'s U.S. Army in the Vietnam War series.

Ralph E. Dowling is Assistant Professor in the Department of Speech Communication at Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana. He is a member of the Terrorism and the News Media Research Project and has published extensively in this field.

Max Hastings is Editor of The Daily Telegraph newspaper in London. As a correspondent he has reported from more than 60 countries. He is author of more than a dozen books on military history including The Korean War (1987).

Michael A. Hennessy is a doctoral candidate in history at the University of New Brunswick. His MA thesis examined U.S. Marine Corps pacification operations in I Corps in Vietnam. He has written a chapter on Vietnam in the Centre's forthcoming book, Deception Operations: Studies in the East-West Context.

Timothy J. Lomperis is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Duke University. He is author of Reading the Wind: the Literature of the Vietnam War (1986) and The War Everyone Lost—and Won (1984).

Clarence R. Wyatt is a doctoral candidate in history at the University of Kentucky where he writing his dissertation on the role of the American press in the Vietnam war.