

CONTRIBUTORS

Ian Beckett is Head of the School of Literature and History at the University of Luton. He is editor of the journal, Small Wars and Insurgencies, and among his numerous publications is The Roots of Counter-Insurgency (1988).

Jennifer C. Cornell teaches English at Cornell University. She is completing a book on representations of Northern Ireland in contemporary British television drama.

John Darby is Director of the International Programme on Conflict Resolution and Ethnicity for the United Nations University, and Professor at the University of Ulster at Coleraine.

Christopher Hewitt is a professor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the Baltimore County Campus of the University of Maryland. He has written extensively on ethnic conflict and political violence. Among his publications is Consequences of Political Violence (1993).

Dennis Kennedy is a Senior Research Fellow in the Institute of European Studies at the Queen's University of Belfast. He was formerly Deputy Editor of The Irish Times, Dublin, and from 1985-91 European Commission Representative in Northern Ireland. He is author of The Widening Gulf (1988).

W. Andrew Terrill is an international security analyst for the University of California's Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory. He maintains a special interest in the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East, and is author of numerous articles on Third World military topics.

