

CONTRIBUTORS

Michael B. Bishku is an Adjunct Professor of Middle Eastern and African History at the University of North Florida (Jacksonville). He is currently editing a book on nationalism and Islam in the Balkans, and has written numerous articles on Turkish foreign policy as well as British, American and South Asian interests and involvement in the Arab world.

Yvon Grenier is Associate Professor of Political Science at St. Francis Xavier University. He has published extensively on Salvadoran politics and political change in Latin America. He is author of Guerre et Pouvoir au Salvador (1994).

Michael M. Gunter is a professor of political science at Tennessee Technological University. He is author of The Kurds in Turkey: A Political Dilemma (1990) and The Kurds of Iraq: Tragedy and Hope (1992).

Thomas G. Mitchell received his PhD in International Relations from the University of Southern California in 1990. He has published two articles on the internal settlement as a counterinsurgency strategy in the Winter 1992 and Summer 1993 issues of Conflict Quarterly.

