

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

DEMANDE DE COMMUNICATIONS

A special issue of Material History Review (No. 44, Fall 1996) will be devoted to the subject of "Housing." Intended to coincide with the opening of a major exhibit on Domestic Technology at the National Museum of Science and Technology, the issue will highlight current research in Housing employing interdisciplinary methods in Material History/Culture. Topics might include the interpretation of cities, neighbourhoods, or houses as artifacts of material culture; technology, food, decorative arts, textiles, and other "stuff" of everyday life at home; and, questions of diffusion, production, intention, function, class, meaning, and difference as they are expressed through the material world of Canadian domestic life.

Interested researchers should send a 250-word abstract by December 15, 1995, to the guest editor:

Annmarie Adams
School of Architecture
McGill University
815 Sherbrooke St. W.
Montréal, Québec
H3A 2K6
tel. (514) 398-6706
fax (514) 398-7372

Preliminary papers submitted by February 2, 1996, will be submitted to peer review. Final submissions will be due by mid-April 1996.

Un numéro spécial de la Revue d'histoire de la culture matérielle (n° 44, automne 1996) sera consacré au « logement » et doit coïncider avec l'ouverture d'une importante exposition sur la technologie domestique au Musée national des sciences et de la technologie. Il fera le point de la recherche qui se fait actuellement sur le logement à l'aide de méthodes interdisciplinaires en matière d'histoire, y compris l'histoire de la culture matérielle. Les sujets peuvent comprendre l'interprétation de villes, de quartiers ou de maisons en tant qu'objets de culture matérielle, la technologie, les aliments, les arts décoratifs, les textiles et autres objets de la vie de tous les jours au foyer, ou encore des questions de diffusion, de production, d'intention, de fonction, de classe, de signification et de différence, bref les sujets exprimés par le milieu matériel de la vie domestique au Canada.

Les chercheurs et chercheuses intéressés devraient faire parvenir un résumé de 250 mots de leur communication, au plus tard le 15 décembre 1995, à la rédactrice invitée :

815, rue Sherbrooke ouest
Montréal (Québec)
H3A 2K6
Téléphone : (514) 398-6706
Télécopieur : (514) 398-7372

Les communications préliminaires soumises avant le 2 février 1996 seront étudiées par un comité de lecture. Les dernières communications devront nous parvenir avant la mi-avril 1996.

Transformation

The Transformation series presents original research on science and technology history and issues in Canada through refereed monographs or collections of shorter studies, consistent with the museum's thematic framework "The Transformation of Canada."

Canadian Historical Association

Société historique du Canada

Founded in 1922, the Canadian Historical Association (CHA) is an internationally recognized, bilingual association committed to encouraging historical research and public interest in history, promoting the preservation of historic sites and buildings, and publishing historical works and documents. It lobbies archives, museums, governments, and granting agencies in the interest of historians, particularly on issues relating to the preservation of heritage materials and public access to historical documents. Many members are professional historians, but the CHA also encourages anyone with an interest in history to join.

Membership categories include professional, sustaining, general, student, and emeritus as well as affiliated society and institutional members. All members receive:

- the Association's Bulletin, a newsletter with topical articles, information on forthcoming conferences, fellowships and research grants, and news from historians and archives across Canada.
- the annual Journal of the CHA with the best papers presented at the annual conference;
- an average of two Historical Booklets annually as well as booklets from Canada's Ethnic Group series.

Other services include a subscription service to numerous learned journals, and a defence fund to protect members when legal costs arise from their work.

INTRODUCING OUR LATEST EXHIBIT

THE Virtual Artifact.

Canada's Memorial Theatre and Broadcast Centre is the centrepiece of the Canadian War Museum's expansion and outreach plans - it will connect us with the world.

THE $11 MILLION PASSING THE TORCH CAMPAIGN will make the Museum available to all Canadians, wherever they are. Using the latest technology, tap into our 11,000 piece war art collection, join a group on a live satellite link with peacekeepers in the field, look up the history of Canada's wartime sacrifices on the nation's first memorial database, explore the rest of our 500,000 artifacts.

Making our past come alive - we're virtually there!

Material History Review

The Material History Review provides a venue for refereed articles and research reports encompassing a range of approaches in interpreting the past through an analysis of Canadians' relationships to their material world. Critical reviews of books, exhibitions, and historic sites, artifact studies and reports on collections encourage the use of material evidence in understanding historical change and continuity.

MHR is distributed to more than 250 universities, research institutes, museums, and libraries, in 30 countries. It is indexed in America: History and Life, Journal of American History, Technology and Culture's Current Bibliography in the History of Technology, and Annual Bibliography of Ontario History. MHR is also indexed on the CHIP database, available through the Canadian Heritage Information Network (CHIN).

Revue d'histoire de la culture matérielle

La Revue d'histoire de la culture matérielle présente des articles et des travaux de recherche ayant fait l'objet de rapports critiques, qui proposent différentes façons d'aborder l'étude et l'interprétation du passé par l'analyse des rapports unissant les Canadiens et leur monde matériel. Des critiques de livres, d'expositions et de lieux historiques, des études d'objets et des articles sur les grandes collections canadiennes favorisent l'utilisation de témoins matériels dans l'interprétation du changement et de la continuité historiques.

La Revue est envoyée à plus de 250 universités, instituts de recherche, musées et bibliothèques dans 30 pays. Elle est répertoriée dans America: History and Life, Journal of American History, dans la « Current Bibliography in the History of Technology » publiée dans Technology and Culture, et dans Annual Bibliography of Ontario History. Elle figure également dans la base de données CHIP, accessible par l'entremise du Réseau canadien d'information sur le patrimoine (RCIP).
